Krista Jones, DNP, MSN, RN, PHNA-BC, FAAN, ELAN Fellow

Dr. Krista Jones is Director of UIC College of Nursing's Urbana Regional Campus and a Clinical Associate Professor in the Department of Population Health Nursing Science. Dr. Jones is a board certified Advanced Public Health Nurse. At UIC she has completed a Doctorate in Nursing Practice degree (2011), a Master's degree in Advanced Community Health Nursing (2007), a Post-Master's degree in Nursing Administration and Leadership (2009) and a Teaching Certificate in Nursing Education (2008). For the last 18 years, Dr. Jones has instructed undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral students enrolled in Population Focused Nursing, EBP, Professionalism, Nursing Theory, and Leadership and Management courses.

Dr. Jones is the author of numerous publications. She currently leads a team of academic librarians and nurses from population health, acute and clinical agency settings who have received five cycles of grant funding from the National Libraries of Medicine to provide face to face and online instructional sessions to educate public health nurses (PHNs) on the acquisition, translation and application of evidence to inform their practice. In phase three this work was expanded to provide online evidence-based education to acute and ambulatory care nurses and in phase 5 to all health care professionals.

She is a member of the Illinois Public Health Nursing Leadership Academic Practice Workgroup. This team conducted a needs assessment of public health nurses and faculty across Illinois to determine priorities for partnership activities, and the challenges impacting PHN practice. These results were used to develop innovative strategies to address the educational needs of new and existing PHN workforce. Additionally, these efforts have spawned three consecutive annual state-wide academic practice conferences and a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Grant that has funded 30 state-wide academic practice community service projects.

Dr. Jones has held several leadership positions in local, regional and national nursing and public health organizations. These include current Chair of the Council of Public Health Nursing Organizations (CPHNO), President of the Association of Community Health Nursing Educators (ACHNE), President of the Champaign County Board of Health, and Chair of the Illinois Nursing Workforce Center Board of Directors.

Dr. Jones scholarship has been recognized locally by Carle Foundation Hospital, statewide by the Illinois Public Health Association, and regionally by two different Research Sections of the Midwest Nursing Research Society -- Public Health and Adolescent Health. Additionally, she has received the Daisy Award for teaching excellence, the Sigma Theta Tau Alpha Lambda Chapter Nursing Recognition Award, the Urbana Faculty Excellence Award and two Silver Circle Awards for teaching excellence at UIC. She is also a 2012 recipient of the Illinois Board of Higher Education Nursing Faculty Fellowship and a 2020 American Association of Colleges of Nursing (AACN) Elevating Leaders in Academic Nursing (ELAN)

Program Fellow. In October 2023, she was inducted as a Fellow of the American Academy of Nursing.

Lynda Bartlett, MS/MBA, RN

Lynda Bartlett is currently a Case Manager Lead at the University of Chicago Medicine. She also serves on the Institutional Review Board (IRB) and Nursing Research Committee at the University of Chicago. She earned her Bachelor of Science Degree in Nursing (BSN) from Saint Xavier University, Chicago, in 1986 and her Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) with a focus in community health and nursing administration from Saint Xavier University in 1998. Also from Saint Xavier University, she earned her Master of Business degree (MS/MBA).

Lynda started her career as a staff nurse on a step-down cardiac telemetry unit and then moved to research. For seventeen years, she managed the Clinical Research Center (CRC) at the University of Chicago Medicine where she managed clinical staff who provided nursing care at the bedside to adult and pediatric patients participating in physician initiated studies. This research encompassed both inpatient and outpatient areas of endocrinology, pulmonary, surgery, psychiatry, sleep medicine, rheumatology and transplant.

Lynda is also adjunct nursing faculty at Saint Xavier University where she acts as a clinical instructor for the Nursing Care of Adult Practicum. She provides hands-on experiences to nursing students whose patients have complex disease processes. Lynda has served on the adjunct faculty council and the alumni board at Saint Xavier University. She has been a preceptor/mentor to many nurses who are pursuing their Master's in Nursing Education. She also has experience in the outpatient setting where she has acted as a triage nurse in a variety of specialty areas that include endocrinology, general internal medicine, nephrology, rheumatology, dermatology and dermatology surgery. Finally, Lynda is actively involved with Sigma Theta Tau International and now serves on the Fellow Committee Sigma Foundation for Nursing.

Heather Escobar, MSN, CNE

Heather Escobar is the Senior Director of Nursing at Elgin Community College. Ms. Escobar has been in this role since 2022. She earned her Baccalaureate degree in nursing from Bowling Green State University in 1997. Her nursing career began in Ohio as a public health nurse for a rural community with limited access to healthcare. She quickly became the Program Director for Child and Family Health Services overseeing a large grant funded program to provide prenatal care, well child care, and child abuse prevention services for this largely underserved community.

Ms. Escobar moved to the Chicagoland area in 2005. In Illinois, she became a certified neonatal intensive care nurse and neonatal resuscitation program educator. This began her love for educating nurses. Heather transitioned to nursing education as the simulation coordinator at Kishwaukee College in Malta, IL, while still serving as a neonatal nurse on the weekends. At this time, she earned her Master of Science in Nursing Education from American Sentinel University, now part of Post University, Waterbury, Connecticut. Her role at Kishwaukee College expanded to tenured nursing faculty teaching pediatric nursing while continuing to oversee clinical simulation for nursing and allied health professions. While at Kishwaukee, Heather was awarded the IBHE Nurse Fellowship Award and earned her Certified Nurse Educator (CNE) credential.

In 2020, Ms. Escobar returned full time to bedside neonatal nursing to assist with the care of high risk neonates and their families during the pandemic. Heather returned to academia in 2022, accepting the Director position at Elgin Community College where she works to promote nursing education in this majority minority nursing program. Access to quality nursing education is an ongoing passion for Heather who is honored to serve on this Advisory Board.

Frances La Monica, MS, RN

Fran LaMonica recently retired as the Executive Director of the Chicago Bilingual Nurse Consortium (CBNC), a non-profit 501 (c)(3) which assists Internationally Educated Nurses in achieving professional licensure in Illinois. As the CBNC Executive Director (2016-2022) she provided oversight of the grants provided by the Chicago Community Trust, Sisters of Mercy and the Walder Foundation. Under Ms. LaMonica's leadership, CBNC collaborated with the Welcome Back Initiative (WBI), a nationwide program that assists internationally educated healthcare professionals to transition their practice to their new home in the United States, and with Daley College of the Chicago City Colleges to open the Chicago Welcome Back Center in August 2022.

Ms. LaMonica has over 40 years' experience in clinical, educational, quality & compliance, and administrative positions. She received her Bachelor's degree in Science (Nursing) from St. Xavier University and a Master's degree in Science (Nursing) from Rush University.

Ms. LaMonica practiced Nursing at Mercy Hospital and Medical Center in various clinical and leadership positions for several years. She also worked as the Clinical Staff Educator with the Illinois Department of Public Health from 2000-2004. She was an adjunct faculty member of St. Xavier University College of Nursing from 1989-2007. She also worked as an Independent Contractor/ Nurse Paralegal with Donohue, Brown, Matheson, Smyth, and Associates from 2015-2017. Her professional experience includes international nursing practice in Croatia during the war in 1994 where she served as a volunteer nurse caring for victims of war in the surgical shock unit of the Clinical Hospital Split.

Ms. LaMonica is a recipient of the 1995 Cook County Outstanding Community Leader award and the 1996 Excellence in Nursing Leadership award from Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society of Nursing, Alpha Omicron Chapter.

Blanca Miller, PhD, RN

Dr. Miller has been the author and co-author of publications and has presented at the local, state, and national level. Her research areas are recruitment and retention of underrepresented, educationally/environmentally, or economically disadvantaged nursing students, nursing education and advance care planning/end of life care.

Glenda Morris-Burnett, PhD, MUPP, RN

Glenda Morris-Burnett is currently an assistant professor at Rush University with teaching responsibilities in health promotion, population-based health care, public health and health policy. Dr. Morris-Burnett was an Illinois Public Health Research Fellow through the Centers for Disease Control at the University of Illinois School of Public Health and has done international research through the Fogarty Minority International Research Training Grant. Dr. Morris-Burnett has a Bachelor's of Science in Nursing from Rush University, a Master's in Urban Planning and Policy with a specialization in health and a PhD in Nursing Science from the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Dr. Morris-Burnett has an extensive background in community engagement, population-based health care, community partnership development, and public health. She has worked as a public health nurse for the city of Chicago and at Great Cities-Neighborhood Initiatives at the University of Illinois at Chicago planning health and health related services to women, children and families. She has worked, as a project director, evaluator, and led teams in the addressing health issues and communicating health needs. She has worked on two Healthy Tomorrows Partnership for Children funded programs by Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA). These were REACH-futures and Teens Educating Learning and Leading (TELL). REACH-futures was a project that developed a collaborative partnership among community partners and professional nurses and community health workers delivering services to underserved women and children. During this project Dr. Morris-Burnett developed the curriculum to teach community health workers how to engage with health care professionals, families and communities when delivering health care services to families with children under the age of 2. Teens Educating Learning and Leading (TELL) was a project that developed a collaborative partnership with professional nurses, adult community health workers and teen advocates to deliver services to adolescent mothers. Teen girls were recruited from high schools to serve as teen advocates for teen moms. This was an additional team member to work with teen moms to support them to remain in school while learning to be a parent.

Dr. Morris-Burnett has worked with community health workers and received funding from the Illinois Department of Public Health Family Case Management/ Healthy Start and Teen Advocacy to teach community health workers and paraprofessionals from Chicago Department of Public Health (CDPH), Cook County Department of Public Health (CCDPH) and other community based organizations in delivering health services to families with children that were at risk and high risk for adverse health outcomes. Dr. Morris-Burnett also has worked with faith based health care in identifying health issues and working with congregations through such initiatives as Acts of Faith to develop strategies that address health issues in African American communities on the south side of Chicago.

Dr. Morris-Burnett currently works with the Infant and Maternal Mortality Among African Americans Task Force (IMMT) systems subcommittee exploring ways to address gaps in how families, communities and legislators are provided education on the health and well-being of Black/African-American women their children and families. The committee examines how policies and social systems are used to engage families in the health of women and children to improve health outcomes. Dr. Morris-Burnett's research interests are in women's health, community engagement, health inequities, community based participatory research and health care policy. Additionally, Dr. Morris-Burnett also works with the Illinois Public Health Nurses Academic Practice Partnership Work Group to promote academic/practice partnerships that engages public health nurses and populations in partnership to promote health equity.

Theresa E. Towle, DNP, FNP-BC, PMHNP-BC, APRN-FPA

Dr. Theresa Towle is a distinguished dual-certified Psychiatric and Family Nurse Practitioner with over 40 years of extensive experience in the healthcare field. She is the owner and primary provider at Balance Health, LLC, and collaborates with Genesis Clinical Services in Wheaton, IL. Her practice spans across Illinois, Arizona, and Colorado, focusing on psychiatric and basic primary care needs. Additionally, Dr. Towle imparts her vast knowledge as an adjunct professor in the graduate nursing program at Loyola University Chicago when needed.

Dr. Towle's career journey is a testament to her dedication and expertise. She began as a nursing assistant, progressing through roles as a registered nurse, nurse practitioner, university faculty member, and ultimately, a business owner. Her clinical experience includes advanced pain management, neurology, and neurosurgery. She has practiced at prestigious institutions such as the University of Chicago and Rush University Medical Center in Illinois. Her commitment to underserved communities is evident from her work with the Indian Health Service in Arizona and Nevada, providing care for Native American tribes around the Grand Canyon and the Mohave Desert. Before her tenure in Illinois, she practiced in various specialties at community hospitals and clinics in Northwest Indiana.

In academia, Dr. Towle has held significant roles, including Director of the Family Nurse Practitioner Program and Interim Director of the Psychiatric Mental-Health Nurse Practitioner Program at Rush University and University of St. Francis. She was instrumental in securing a $1.2 million ANEW grant at the University of St. Francis, aimed at training Family Nurse Practitioners (FNPs) and Psychiatric Mental-Health Nurse Practitioners (PMHNPs) to serve in underserved areas.

Dr. Towle's professional contributions are extensive. She has served on the Board of Directors for the Illinois Society for Advanced Practice Nursing and as the Outreach Director for the International Parkinson & Movement Disorder Society. She has also been a part of the speakers' bureau for the American Association of Nurse Practitioners (AANP) and the Collaborative On REMS Education (CO*RE) series, focusing on opioid prescribing and abuse. In collaboration with REMS Education, she published a podcast on safe opioid prescribing for primary care providers through AANP. Her professional memberships include AANP, ISAPN, American Nurses Association, Neuroscience Education Institute, American Psychological Nurses Association, and Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society for Nursing.

Dr. Towle's academic credentials are equally impressive. She earned her Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Indiana University, her Master of Science in Nursing from St. Xavier University, and her Doctorate of Nursing Practice from Rush University in Chicago. At Rush University, she successfully established a multidisciplinary presence within an international physician organization. Additionally, she holds a certificate in Clinical Trials Management from the University of Chicago.

Dr. Towle's career reflects her unwavering commitment to healthcare, education, and serving underserved communities, making her a respected leader in the field of nursing.
